TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1866.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE, August 25, 1886 - De'cgates to the Lova Southern Union Convention are requested, on their arrival, to call at the headquarters of the National Union Club, No. 1105 Chesnut street, and register their names. They will consider the building at their entire service during their residence in this city.

Citizens of Philadelphia anxious to extend their hospitality to our Union brethren of the South will please report at once how many gentlemen they can entertain.

It is requested that during the session of this Loyal Convention of true Southern Union men, our fellowcitizens shall display the Union flag from the shipping, public buildings, business places, and private restdences generally.

JOHN E. ADDICKS, Chairman. A. M. WALKINSHAW, Secretary.

"There are Giants in these Days"-The Intellect in our City.

WE are accustomed to view with admiration the assemblies of intellect which graced the meetings of statesmen in the earlier days of the Republic, and glancing down the vista of years, to behold with awe the mental giants who met to take counsel together for the nation's good. But if we dispel the clouds of time which enable the statesmen of the past to appear more able than those of the present, and view in the calm level of criticism all the political gatherings which have ever met in our land, we may safely place the one which met yesterday in our city above all its predecessors. Nor do we make this statement under the influence of any sympathy for that body, for although our whole heart goes out to welcome and bid God-speed to the Convention, yet were it composed of our political foes we would give it the same credit, To look at the list of names is sufficient proof to justify any high encomium on the mental powers of its members.

There are two distinct classes found in that body, who, while united in principles aud a common sympathy, are utterly dissimilar in all other qualities. The one, and that one to which most interest attaches itself, is composed of tried Unionists of the South-men who have come out of the flery furnace unscathed, who have dared every peril, sacrificed every comfort, and to whom belongs the welcome of "Good servant, well done!" There are no class of men to whom a more hear y and enthusiastic welcome is due, to whom should be given the best gifts in the hands of the nation, and to whom should be allotted the spoils which always come to the share of the victors. They have had their day of suffering; they have borne the cross, and it is time that they should wear the crown. The great majority of them are men of whom we have never heard. Nor do we hesitate to acknowledge that but few of them have any national reputation. That such is the case is the best evidence of their devotion to the cause of the Union and their consistent adherence to the principles of freedom, living as they did in a country in which none could rise who did not bow to the Baal of slavery, and who since the war commensed had not taken an active part on the side of treason. In 1861 there were not ten rightcous men in the Southern Sodom. With the exception of John Minor Botts, of Virginia A. J. Hamilton, of Texas, and the late Judge Pettigru, of South Carolina, we can recall no leading Southern man who five years ago was true to the Union cause. All the statesmen of the South were men of the pro-slavery Democracy, and formed a clique from which all others were excluded

Hence, there need be no cause for surprise that the tried elements who are now meeting in our midst were never allowed an opportunity to be heard in the "good days of old." They are the rising men to-day, and before another decade is past will be in a position to wield that influence which is theirs by right of consistency.

On the other side, we have the Northern honorary members, who, having had an opportunity of showing their ability, have nearly all achieved a national reputation. We must speak of them in classes, and they comprise all the professions, and the greatest ornaments of our country. There is hardly a man in letters or politics in the Northern States, who is known on both sides of the Atlantic as a man of great ability, who is not here.

In literature we find such men as R. W. Emerson, O. W. Holmes, John G. Whittier, Parsons, Gilmore, and a host of lights of which we are justly proud. Nearly every loyal Governor is found among them, and a host of ex-Governors of every shade of political opinion. If Mr. President Foster was to stand in the Continental, and with a blow of his gavel call the United States Senate to order, he would find more than a quorum present. As the vast procession passed before us we recognized many taces last seen on the floor of the upper House. There was the venerable Senator from Indiana, the Hon. Henry S. Lane a man, than whom no abler has for years adorned our Senatea patriot of the most unflinching kind, an orator of the first class, and a statesman of unquestioned ability. There was Governor Morgan, and Senator Harris, of New York, gentlemen of national reputation for loyalty and talent. But we cannot prolong the list. Nearly every loyal benator is here, while of President Lincoln's Cabinet, Messrs. Harlan, Dennison, and Speed either are present, or will shortly come. In fact, after examining the list, and carefully observing the class of men who compose its ranks, we have only to reiterate our previous remark, that an abler body of men never met together on American

How the Martyred Lincoln Answered Them.

THE original and simon-pure Copperheads, utterly confounded and unmanned by the magnificent popular demonstration of yesterday, can find nothing to say, except to indulge in a little of their stale and stereotyped rant about the negro, because, forsooth, two delegates from the State of New York, Vred. Douglass and Theodore Tilton, saw fit to walk together. Well, what of it? They are both citizens of that State; both influential editors; both eloquent men; both loyal and true. Fred. Douglass is the rightful representative of two hundred thousand brave men of his color, who tought to save this Government from overthrow by Rebels and traitors. Let those who would now pour contempt upon these brave men, thirty thousand of whom laid down their lives for us, remember the prophetic words of our great martyr, the sainted Lincoln, when, with the brave black soldiers and their base mailgners in his mind's eye, he said :- "And there will be some black men who can remember that, with silent tongue and clinched teeth and steady eye and well-poised bayonet, they have helped mankind on to this great consummation; while I fear there will be some white ones unable to forget that with malignant heart and deceitful speech they have striven to hinder it." These men now pretend to be walking in Lincoln's footsteps and carrying out his policy. Let them remember his words.

The Greeting Vesterday.

THERE is no mistaking such a demonstration of public sentiment as was made here yesterday in the reception of our loyal brethren from the South. The whole city put on a holiday attire, as if for a national testival. There has not been such a display of general jubilation since the fall of Richmond. As the grand procession passed slong the crowded streets, and the people recognized one after another of the gallant men of the South who fought treason and rebellion at their very doors and hearthstones, such cheers went up as must have gladdened the hearts of the recipients. It was the greeting of the loyal hearts of Philadelphia to our tried and faithful brethren of the South.

THE PROSPECTS OF THE COTTON CROP.-Notwithstanding the dismal prophecies of those who deemed that with freedom to the negroes would come ruin to the Southern crops, it seems likely that the supply of cotton this year will be fully up to anticipations. At present the hands are engaged in picking, and will be for several weeks. The reports are so conflicting that it seems almost impossible to come to any definite conclusion; but we will soon be enabled to learn, and feel pretty sure that it will equal, if not exceed, that of last year. All the "dead" eotton left from the nebellion has been cleared away, and whatever is raised will be due entirely to the labor of the past year.

THE REPUBLICAN INVINCIBLES .- Last night the first grand demonstration of the campaign, so far as the Republican Invincibles are concerned, came off. With the uniform which they wore in the victorious campaigns of 1860 and 1864, lighted by torches and preceeded by a band of music, they paraded our streets six hundred strong. The Invincibles are one of the best organized and most useful political organizations. Composed of the young men of the party, they abound in enterprise and enthusiasm, and exert a powerful influence in the cause of freedom and equal rights. We hope to see their ranks yet more angmented.

-The Legislature of New Jersey will meet in extra session at Trenton next Monday, when the Constitutional Amendment will doubtless be ratified, and (we trust) a Republican United States Senator elected. We feel authorized to state that Senstor Scovel will act with the Republican Unionists heartily and throughout, unless special pains be taken to drive him away from us. -N. F. Tribune.
